Art der Veranstaltung: Hauptseminar	Angeboten im: Herbstsemester 2014

Kursbeschreibung:

This course is about international relations and focuses mainly on the question of how international organizations are used at various levels of governance in the international system to promote international cooperation. We will discuss questions such as: Why do states design international organizations and what effects do these institutions have on international and domestic politics? Or more specific: Does the UN Security Council help to keep peace? Why did the international community set up the World Bank or the International Energy Agency? Are international organizations merely a vehicle for major powers to advance their myopic policy preferences?
